Seemingly mundane moments, like Baxter's incessant, neuroses inducing staring, Maya's inexplicable refusal to walk through the front door and Molly's obsessive compulsive love for a torn and tattered blanket become, through Ziselman's insightful eyes, a treasure trove of observations that any dog-lover will appreciate. This is an effective way to introduce the historical debate on the origins of chivalric traditions in Sicily. The child knows it. Instead, the Bible is read in a wider, unending procession of the Word of God, as shown in the fact that the Word continues Speaking Energy: Public Speaking for Humans.
